

Low-Light Tactics for Law Enforcement

The majority of officer involved shootings occur during low-light engagements. Officers are required to identify lethal threats before engaging, regardless of the lighting conditions. Therefore, officers need to train and become proficient with low-light tactics. This course is designed to give officers a tactical advantage in low-light conditions. In addition to threat identification, officers will learn how to deploy their flashlights to search, navigate, control suspects and other useful tactics. This course will change the way you operate during low-light engagements. Live fire range exercises as well as force on force scenarios will be utilized.
